

Michelle Dickinson

Michelle Dickinson is a nanotechnologist, educator, author, television presenter and science communicator. She is also known as Nanogirl – an alter-ego she first invented to overcome her shyness and nerves around public speaking.

Michelle is an entrepreneur who founded NanogirlLabs, the umbrella company that runs her live shows, Kitchen Science Cookbook launches and more. She is also a co-founder of OMGTech which provides children of all ages and backgrounds access to learning opportunities about technology. Michelle is passionate about creating innovative ways for everyone to have a positive relationship with science and technology.

www.medickinson.com

BUSINESS SCHOOL CENTRE FOR INNOVATION AND ENTREPRENEURSHIP

Colouring pages produced by the University of Auckland Business School's Centre for Innovation and Entrepreneurship. Find out about how we can help you unleash your potential through our free technology enablement and innovation and entrepreneurship development opportunities – www.cie.auckland.ac.nz