

Meet our PDS co-secretary

Dr Shikha Pundir is a Research Fellow at the Liggins Institute, The University of Auckland, New Zealand. She obtained her masters degree in Biochemistry from India, following which she migrated to NZ and decided to supplement her degree with another masters in Food Science and Nutrition, from Faculty of Science, The University of Auckland. While doing her masters at the Liggins Institute, she got interested in early life nutrition and a few years later graduated with a PhD degree in Health Science, focused on exploring the unknown mysteries of human milk. Her research to date has looked at the human milk profile, and its influence on infant development with a specific focus on the biologically active components present in milk. Besides research, she enjoys hiking, cooking and traveling with family and friends.
