Dr Alan Shiell is the Executive Director of the Centre of Excellence in Intervention and Prevention Science (CEIPS) Ltd in Melbourne, a new public health research centre established to strengthen the preventive health effort in Victoria. The centre will develop its own research agenda, to advance the science of systems thinking and its application to population health, and will act as a catalyst to support new working relationships between research, policy and practice. Previously he was Professor of Health Economics at the University of Calgary, holding a Health Scientist award from the Alberta Heritage Foundation for Medical Research, and a Canadian Institutes of Health Research Chair in Applied Public Health. His research interests include the economic evaluation of social interventions designed to promote health and reduce inequalities.

Wednesday 12 October 2011

12.30 - 1.30 pm, Seminar Room 515
Melbourne School of Population Health
Level 5, 207 Bouverie Street, Carlton

ALL WELCOME