

BEARDER CHANGE

One morning my mum said to move the tank were my lizard lives because the door was open. It was still raining but my mum didn't know. She told me to take the lizard out side. I didn't want to argue so I headed out into the backyard when...
CRACK!

I thought I was the same person but then I realised that I wasn't. This made me angry. I knew I was a lizard because all I want to eat was crickets, beetles, grubs and sunflowers. The food wasn't great but one good thing was that I got to stay up as late as I wanted.

The next day I wanted to change back but there was no storm coming. I looked up at the sky through the window of my tank for about 8 hours. Suddenly my lizard (who looked like me) came and picked the tank lid up. He took me out of the tank and at that moment lightning struck at us and we changed back.

I quickly ran back inside and am now always very careful not to be near my lizard when a storm is coming.
