

The girl who cried shark by Asher

There was once a girl who had to take care of starfish. She eventually got extremely bored of her job. Then she had an idea. She decided she would play a trick on people at the beach.

Later she called out, "Shark!" People came running yelling, "Where?" But there was no shark.

Some more time went by and she was still bored so she decided to call out shark again. "Shark!" she screamed and again people came from everywhere. "Where?" they asked and she replied, "You just missed it". The beach goers stomped away in disappointment.

As she was going about her job she then saw a real shark. She screamed, "Help, there is a real shark!" She called to the people to come and help her but nobody did. She ran away terrified and the shark ate her starfish. She found a boy and girl and told them to run but they thought it was a trick. She asked herself, "Why don't they believe me?" But she knew why and she had learnt an important lesson.

Don't lie or no one will believe you when you do tell the truth