The site gives good a description of lice and their life cycle and how they can be detected and treated.

Chaplains Chatter

Don’t underestimate the trauma going on in our children when we are upset with them. We are their life. Their security. Their world. And talking to them non stop when they feel like this often has exactly the reverse affect and will cause them to be more upset and distraught. They are simply unable to listen to us because of the way they feel and we need to learn to be quiet with them.

Instead we should use much more non verbal communication. Hold them. Rub their shoulders. Smile or offer caring facial expressions. Then, when they begin to calm down, you can bring in the words and address the issue on a more verbal, logical level.

Happy parenting!!
