

Anzac Day Poppies Editing Answers

The following passage about Anzac Day has incorrect spelling and punctuation. After identifying the errors, rewrite the text with the correct spelling and punctuation.

The red poppy is considered to be a symbol. A symbol is something that represents for stands for something else. The red poppy is recognised as a symbol of war remembrance throughout the world. We use the red poppy to represent remembrance of Australian and New Zealand Army Corps (ANZAC) personnel who died during the First World War and we commemorate this day on 25th April each year.

The red poppy was said to be a common sight on the battlefields. It was one of the first plants to spring up and grew easily on the land churned up by the impact of war. The colour of the flower is associated with remembering the loss of life and sacrifices the soldiers made. Today, funds raised through the sale of poppies during the Poppy Appeal, go towards helping war veterans and their families.

